Facts about Danish Shipping

Denmark is the world's sixth largest shipping nation. By transporting goods to and from all corners of the world, shipping companies create a global infrastructure for trade and thus opportunities for economic growth at home and abroad.

1. Danish shipping companies create value

Shipping is the backbone of globalisation, driving trade, growth and development across the globe. Shipping is Denmark's largest export industry. In Denmark, shipping companies account for approx. 22% of total exports.

2. Danish shipping companies take responsibility

Denmark is characterised by quality shipping based on responsibility, high standards and decent working conditions – regardless of nationality. We strive to continuously reduce our climate and environmental footprint and to ensure global regulation that benefits the environment. Working with organisations and governments, we are committed to fighting corruption, fraud and piracy.
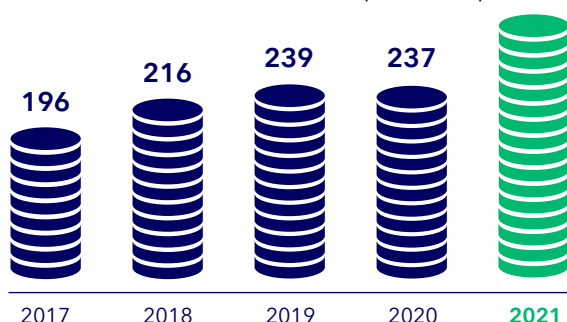

3. Danish shipping companies are global

Danish shipping has the entire world as both workplace and marketplace. More than two-thirds of the shipping companies' activities take place outside Europe. To be successful, Danish shipping companies must be both more skilled and more efficient than their international competitors. Free and equal access to global markets as well as stable and competitive framework conditions are crucial for the success of shipping companies.
